The zoo has been housing the 16-year-old rhino for the past six years, but now officials say he's at the end of his life, and is not as healthy as he once was. The zoo hopes to find a new home for Dambi this winter, and is setting up a Facebook page where the public can help. "Dambi's days are numbered and we don't want to see this beautiful animal lose his beautiful life in vain," the Calgary Zoo said in a statement. The zoo says this is not an easy decision to make, but they know it's the best decision for Dambi. "Dambi was born in Australia and raised in Africa, where his life was similar to the African black rhino population," the zoo said. "He was a typical male and was part of a herd group." The zoo says Dambi will leave behind a large family, as well as friends from around the world, including the internet community. It hopes to find a family with an extensive experience caring for animals, as well as a willingness to work with the zoo to ensure the rhino gets the care it needs. Dambi is the first animal from Calgary to be retired, after the zoo's last two elephants, two female Burmese elephants, were sent to a sanctuary in the Philippines.Q: how to give style to html tag I want to
