Microsoft released its first major Mobile operating system for smartphones back in 2012, Windows Phone (formerly known as Windows Mobile) boasted some of the best features to date, but since being shut down, it has seen only slow progress. Nevertheless, those that have stuck with Microsoft's mobile platform were rewarded last week when Microsoft announced that the Windows Mobile platform is now gaining new features and improvements to bring it up to par with rival platforms. Windows 10 Mobile Anniversary Update Coming to All Windows Phones Microsoft is about to introduce the first major update for Windows Phone this year, and it will likely bring numerous new features to the mobile platform as well as other improvements. Dubbed Windows 10 Mobile Anniversary Update, the new version will arrive with improvements for the Calendar, Calendar App, Messaging, Phone, People, Phone App, and other features. The update will be made available in the first quarter of 2018, and it will undoubtedly bring improvements to the phone's core features. Besides making it easier for people to carry out calendar events, the app will also allow users to create events directly from the phone's screen, which is something Microsoft has already implemented in its latest UWP platform. Meanwhile, the Calendar App will have improved search functionality, and the People App will include a recommendation feature that will create a list of contacts that would be a great fit for your personality. Microsoft is also set to introduce a new feature, called "Snap Mode", that is designed to create a more visual interface when browsing through the phone's apps. As the picture below explains, when the Snap Mode is activated, apps that are opened will have to be snapped together to reduce their respective screen sizes. Privacy and Security in Windows 10 Mobile Anniversary Update There's another interesting feature that was introduced in the Anniversary Update that will reduce the
