Enter the computer system's administrator password and navigate to the Start menu. Depending upon how Windows 7 was installed, it is possible that another screen will be displayed showing the Laptop's operating system. You should choose the Laptop's operating system to be Windows Vista. Under the Start Menu, select Control Panel, and then navigate to the Sound icon. Click the System icon, and then click the Volume icon. Click the Hardware tab, and then click the Properties button. In the Device Manager window, click the speaker device, and then click the Action tab. Right-click the speaker device, and then click the Disable button. The speaker should now be disabled. To begin the computer system's startup, click the Start button. In the Startup tab, click the Restart option. In the List of Shutdown Options window, click the Restart option. In the Restart window, click the Restart button. While Restarting, the computer system will display the System Recovery Options. Click the System Repair option, and then click Next. You should get a warning screen that reads Failed system restore. You will need to click on OK to get to the System Repair Options. Choose System Repair, and then click Next. The computer system will begin a System Repair process. To continue the System Repair process, click on Repair your computer. Once the computer system is repaired, you will need to restart the computer system. For Windows Vista users, do the following: Start> Control Panel> Hardware and Sound> Device Manager. Locate the speaker driver, and then select the driver's tab. Click the Uninstall button to remove the driver. NOTE: You may be asked to restart the computer system once the driver has been completely uninstalled. Windows XP users: Start> Control Panel> System and Security> Device Manager. Locate the speaker driver, and then select the driver's tab. Click the Uninstall button to remove the driver. NOTE: You may be asked to restart the computer system once
