A: There is also a free program called DeleteMe, especially designed for people who don't want their browsing history to be saved by their browser: You can set the number of days a cookie needs to be active to delete it, which is quite useful, as the user may restart the browser if the cookie is just a few days old. Q: Can't get UITableViewCell.separatorStyle set I have an application that has multiple views, a single table view amongst them, and that has 2 cells in the view. The cells have 2 labels, one on top of the other, the second on top of the first. I've added the following lines to the class file of the UITableViewController in the view in which the table is appearing: self.tableView.separatorStyle = UITableViewCellSeparatorStyle.None; self.tableView.separatorColor = UIColor.redColor; I expect there to be a separator between the 2 cells. But that doesn't happen. I thought if you set the separatorStyle, the separator color should work. I even checked for self.tableView.separatorColor and it is set to redColor. What am I missing? Edit: Using iOS 7, as someone posted in the comments, the separator works fine if I use UITableViewCellSeparatorStyle.SingleLine. A: Another option would be setting the UITableView.SeparatorStyle self.tableView.separatorStyle = UITableViewCellSeparatorStyle.None; self.tableView.separatorColor = UIColor.redColor; [The collagen-bound LDH activity of the islet cells (author's transl)]. A collagenase isolated from Flavobacterium limicola and an antibody against the protease were employed to detect the collagenase-labeled LDH 09e8f5149f
