Q: How can I get the DOM results into a string I'm pretty new at front-end development, and I'm having an issue where my code returns successfully and updates the DOM, but my function is then done and I'm left with a big string on the page. For example, I am using d3.js to create a simple bar chart. I would like to get my results out into a string, and send that to my php script. Then I'm going to parse out data based on the title (a couple days ago I was only trying to get the number) and do some simple math to chart this: Number of Days body { font: 12px Arial; } #chart { position: absolute; width: 700px; margin: 0 auto; height: 150px; } var duration = 3; var data = []; for (i = 0; i

Factors Affecting Diaphragm Muscle Fatigue. A decrease in diaphragm muscle force occurs with fatigue. The contribution of each factor in fatigue to the diaphragm muscle is variable. To study this mechanism, diaphragm muscle strength was measured by maximum transdiaphragmatic pressure (Pdi) measured by intracardiac catheterization. Phrenic nerve conduction studies were performed to evaluate the peripheral factors, and measurements of the intracellular energy status and intracellular Ca²⁺ were performed to evaluate central factors. The Pdi was decreased after exercise, although the Pdi before exercise was not decreased. The Pdi decreased during laparotomy, although the Pdi before surgery was not decreased. The decrease in Pdi during surgery was not caused by the central fatigue in the diaphragm muscle. The Pdi before surgery decreased during laparotomy, but not during exercise. These results suggest that the central mechanism of fatigue is predominant at rest, and that the peripheral mechanism of fatigue acts as an assist to central mechanisms after exercise. The factors affecting Pdi before exercise were not uniform.
