"I'm disappointed at the free expression that exists in Cuba, in the 50th anniversary year of the 'Black Spring,'" the president of the Federation for Human Rights stated. Q: How to use regex while stripping special characters from a string? I have this string which contains the latitude and longitude. I want to extract the latitude and longitude values separately and store them in two different strings by using regular expression. dta = '{ "lat": 40.414709, "long": 75.595511, "location":"Mumbai", "coordinates":[40.414709, 75.595511] }' Here, 'lat' and 'long' are the coordinates from the string and 'Mumbai' is the location. I tried something like this... import re parsed_string = re.sub(r"(lat|long)": "[0-9.]+", "", dta) But, I am expecting '40.414709' as the latitude value. Here, when I apply the regular expression, it removes the whole string. I hope to get your suggestions for this. Thanks in advance. A: Try: import re parsed_string = re.sub(r'(lat|long)": [0-9.]+', r"\1: "", dta) # '40.414709', '75.595511' Q: Не понятно почему происходит исключение во время выполнения метода Всем привет.
