visor in a vehicle windshield, such as those provided in a motor vehicle. Motor vehicle sun visor assemblies generally comprise a pivotally mounted sun visor that includes a visor body member and a visor support that extends from the visor body member. The visor body member defines a visor opening that is movable in the vertical or horizontal directions relative to the vehicle. The visor support includes a base that is attached to the visor body member. The base is attached to the visor body member so that the visor body member can be pivoted relative to the base about a horizontal axis or about a vertical axis to allow the visor opening to move in a vertical direction relative to the vehicle. It is generally desirable that the visor body member be capable of pivoting about the horizontal axis relative to the base to allow the visor opening to move from a first or stored position in which it is out of the vehicle windshield to a second or extended position in which it is in the vehicle windshield. To this end the visor body member is generally provided with an aperture or slot adjacent to the upper end thereof that provides access to a compression assembly that is generally situated adjacent the pivoting base. The compression assembly, for example in the form of a collar and
