Reacting to a judgment which appeared to let an Iranian man off, the Interior Minister has announced a new ruling that bars the deportation of all non-Iranians to a country from which they did not acquire Iranian citizenship. In a notice published on his official website, Prof. Mohammad-Hossein Sajjadi said: "Iranian Citizenship is a sacred and precious gift from God and no person can under any circumstances seek an end to their citizenship." Addressing the treatment of foreigners in Iran, he said: "The Iranian government, along with the Supreme National Security Council is committed to protecting the rights of foreigners living in Iran and sees to it that these issues are handled firmly and legally." Sajjadi's statement came after a long-running case before the Iranian judiciary which resulted in the acquittal of an Iranian man who left the country over 30 years ago and has lived in Germany since. The Iranian has applied for a new passport and nationality which appeared to have satisfied the court, prompting the minister's pronouncement. According to the Interior Ministry, the verdict was issued on 10 August and took into consideration the declaration of inadmissibility and the death of the Iranian during the appeal period. The original ruling was issued in 2015. The court also considered the fact that the Iranian had a German passport and had stayed in Germany for almost four years before he moved to Iran. Read more An Iranian court acquitted the man who was on trial for being “foreign agent” in a lawsuit filed against him and his mother in 1994, the International Campaign for Human Rights in Iran reported. The Supreme Court upheld the acquittal on August 10, 2018. Like the UK and the US, Iran recognizes dual citizenship. In October 2013, Iranian authorities released arrested British-Iranian couple, Kian Tajbakhsh and his fiancée, Renee Tajbakhsh from Evin Prison after their lawyers managed to secure their release, the Tehran Times reported. Earlier this year, Iranian authorities granted citizenship to Mojahedin Khalq Organisation (MKO), a banned armed group. In 2016, the Iranian regime arrested dual Iranian and Canadian-American citizen Siamak Namazi and his 82-year-

I've been watching this tutorial and in part 5, when he plays the B natural on that chord, the note slowly moves through the chord rather than stay the same. How do I do it so the note will stay the same and not move around, going to the next chord rather than stay the same and move to another chord? I'm a newbie, so excuse my lack of knowing this. A: You simply don't. The reason is the way chord voicings work is to allow the right hand to "fill" the gaps of certain notes. If you have an open C chord, not only is the E the note you are playing, you have to also allow room for the F in the bass. The G note is also "in there", in a sort of ambiguous state. Then you add the occasional B note to keep you from going completely off the rails. You play the C E G F B, and the notes will interlock into a nice progression.
