My string can be as follows: string s = "Hello World" I need to split that word into an array such as this: string[] splitWords = { "H","e","l","l","o"," " , "W","o","r","l","d"} How should I do that? A: If you have an empty space in your string, it should be just split by space. Or to split by any other character, just use something like this: string[] splitted = str.Split(new char[] { " " }, StringSplitOptions.RemoveEmptyEntries); Q: How can I prove this $\lim_{n \rightarrow \infty} \sqrt{n+3} - \sqrt{n} = 1$ \$ How can I prove this $\lim_{n \rightarrow \infty} \sqrt{n+3} - \sqrt{n} = 1$ \$ I tried the squeeze theorem, but it is useless for that problem. A proof of the expression $\lim_{n \rightarrow \infty} \frac{1}{\sqrt{n}}$

I'm having a hard time with using range and how it might be calculated. For example, how do I calculate cos(0.1) to cos(10)? I think the answer should be in 1 to 1, but since the range cannot be changed, how can I go about this problem to get the answer? Any input will be greatly appreciated. A: Every point on the sphere has the same distance to the north pole. To understand why, note that $(\cos(\theta), \sin(\theta))$ is the vector pointing from the origin to the point on the sphere, with that point having polar coordinates $(\cos(\theta), \sin(\theta))$. Since the cosine is just the dot product, $d((\cos(\theta), \sin(\theta)), (1,0)) = \cos(\theta)$. So, the shortest distance between $(1,0)$ and the origin is the distance between $(\cos(\theta), \sin(\theta))$ and the origin, which is the same as the distance from $(\cos(\theta), \sin(\theta))$ to the north pole, which is $\|(\cos(\theta), \sin(\theta)) - (1,0)\| = \sqrt{1 - \cos^2(\theta)} = \sqrt{\sin^2(\theta)}$. The formula for the range of \cos is therefore $\sqrt{1 - \cos^2(0.1)} = \sqrt{1 - \cos^2(10)}$.
