Extending the HLA system for the histocompatibility testing of skin allografts. Chimeras were formed by grafting fragments of donor skin from darkly pigmented donors onto scaly recipient skin. Histocompatibility was assessed by assessing the extension of the graft-versus-host reaction (GVHR) using monoclonal antibodies (mAb) directed at HLA-A, -B, and -DR antigen. The HLA haplotype of the donor and recipient were determined for each chimera using the genetic markers available for class I and II antigens. Thus far, 16 different HLA-DRB haplotypes have been identified which include those of 3 DA, 2 DRB3, 5 DRB4, 6 DRB7, and 10 DRB1 alleles. No HLA-DP antigen has so far been mapped in the DRB region. Eighteen chimeras composed of different combinations of HLA-DRB alleles have been formed with additional chimeras being formed under current investigation. Although pigmentation plays a role in the extension of the GVHR, chimeras with these different to include the DRB region of the major histocompatibility complex, indicating that HLA-typing alone will not suffice to provide the basis for the histocompatibility testing of skin grafts. Q: Why is SNI support required for TLS-authenticated SNI? I read this Wikipedia article about SNI where they talked about how the current version of TLS supports TLS-authenticated SNI. They stated that this use case requires support for
