“This game is more than just a collection of motion capture data,” said EA Sports Senior Producer Heiko Hubertz. “The unique characteristics of the HyperMotion technology allows players to feel as if they are in total control of their actions on the pitch.” To optimize the HyperMotion technology, EA Sports is carefully matching animations and player controls with real-life player movement. For example, player controls have been adjusted to precisely match real-life player movement. “The obvious movement elements — like punching, kicking and holding — are replaced by the best real-life movement on the pitch to make the most authentic football game possible,” Hubertz said. “The motions for control-related actions will feel like you are truly controlling the ball.” In the past, accuracy in player movement was limited by the accuracy of player animations. With the addition of HyperMotion Technology, accuracy in player animation and controls have been fully optimized. This results in a more authentic and detailed soccer experience for fans. FIFA 22 also includes a technical overhaul for the FIFA Ultimate Team (FUT) app as well as a new Master League feature, giving fans access to limited-time leagues or seasons. FUT Master League is a new feature that allows fans to create, navigate and manage a league within the FUT app. Players can play FUT Master Leagues for any length of time, and fans can track and manage their players in their league. FUT Master League includes the ability to create, submit, and manage the league from anywhere as well as track the league. As an additional feature of FUT Master League, players can earn rewards — in the form of coins, FIFA Ultimate Team points and coins — based on their performance on the pitch. These rewards can be used to enhance your players’ attributes, help your team achieve a better overall rating and earn additional rewards in-match. Visit www.FIFA.com/ultimateteam for more information on the new FUT Master League. The FIFA 22 broadcast will feature over 45 hours of live sports content, including original content featuring FIFA 2K commentators Alexander Waske, Andy Barrett, Steve Murray and Stan Maudsley. The full broadcast schedule will be revealed as the season begins. October 4: GAME THEORY SOCCER INTERVIEW OF NAF 2K17
