Dad is out, Mom's sick and I haven't seen or spoken to him for a few days. My brother is staying with me. I'm bored and playing a video game. For a moment I was in a dead tree. I'm not even sure how I got there. I wonder if my brother knocked me out. I want to go home, but I don't want to wake him up. "Daddy, where are we?" As soon as I asked, everything went black again.Richard Cudlipp Richard George Cudlipp, (1 March 1939 – 26 September 2017) was a British news editor, director of public relations, who was largely credited with the rise of the Daily Mail as a popular tabloid newspaper. Biography Born in Ealing, Middlesex, Cudlipp was educated at Ealing County Grammar School and the University of Kent. He joined the Royal Air Force in 1957, as a part-time student at Airmen's Institute, serving in Germany, the Middle East, and Cyprus.

As a public relations executive in the 1970s, he worked for the Mail, for which he later became assistant editor, reporting on social affairs. Cudlipp was credited with turning the Mail into a popular tabloid. He was the Mail's deputy editor from 1985 to 1986, and was subsequently editor from 1986 to 1990. He was an honorary fellow of Brunel University. Cudlipp became director of news and public relations at the Press Association in 1989, continuing in that post until 1993. In 2004 he was voted editor of the Year, by the American Society of Newspaper Editors, for his role in the "Mail's" victory in the battle of Fleet Street over the Independent News and Media group, publisher of The Sun. In the 2014 New Year Honours, Cudlipp was made a Commander of the Order of the British Empire (CBE) "for services to Journalism and the Newspaper Industry". He was one of four recipients of this honor. In 2015, it was announced that he would replace John Mott as chairman of the Press Complaints Commission (PCC). He died on 26 September 2017 at the age of 78.
