This Game is the first game by Mr. Schaefer, who also released the development tools needed to create this game. He is a programmer and self-proclaimed game guru. He decided to go an extra mile and create his own game. He doesn't like that others are the lead roles in the game industry. He tries to convince you that he can make it even better, than the real developers. This is the story of Mr. Schaefer and his life as a developer. This is his story. What can I do with this game: You can hack a game, which allows you to change the variables and do all sorts of things. You can also play the game with 3 friends. It is possible to join up to 4 players. The game is playable for up to 4 players, with a lot of different ways to deal with the bug by using the (new) debugging functions. You can also engage in mini games such as: time based shooting games, hidden object games, 2 player pet guessing games, power up games, jump rope games, wind up games, click and rumble games, ball games and much more. If you remove one of the debuggers you can see real C# code of the game. What can I do with the game: -You are the designer, you need to think of a better game and fix all the bug. -In your spare time you can play the game for fun. -You can play the game with 3 friends and share things together. -You can hack the game world! -You can play the game with 4 players! -You can also play the game without a debugger! In other news: -If you can't find the bugs, you can use the debugger to delete them and make the world a better place for the other players -The Developers hate the word "debugger" and would really hate it if people called it "debugger" -The End If you want to support Mr. Schaefer, you can help him by giving him a positive review on Google Play or on Steam!Q: How to stop the didReceiveMemoryWarning? I am trying to make an application which is going to work with large data, but I am unable to handle the memory warning. ^ ♥ I must add that this isn't intended to be avowedly sexual - if anything the white features on my body provide a "fresh" contrast to the red binder - co-incidentally the T-shirt has a raki design on it by comparison~ Do you like this and what else have you seen re the BlazBlue Collaboration costume? Feel free to share! Sticker Designs ... I haven't the summer of time and effort. Although I've wanted to delve into the web of costumes ever since Brutal [White Day] was released - I cannot seem to put aside time for it at the moment~ I had a time crunch with the doodle DT. This bad boy is now done. Might whip up a couple more types - anyone who wants a doodle that's readily available just msg me~ This one is all about the wings - I like how they moved so that they're positioned more along the sides of the players legs. I've had a real neurotic obsession with the characters design for these stickers. How do you like them? This is a picture that I like: A neat way to see what an item will look like on all nine fighters would require nine doodles. I know how keen you are to see what some of your favorite character designs and fighters would look like with the Collaboration's official stickers - but currently they only have doodle designs done for the Starter Edition designs. I've always liked the starters (I even used the lone Starter Edition 9 character, Ashe as my avatar when I was on my first time on Nash Central. - In my defense Nash Central had replaced ICQ). * If you don't recall my AV get this * So awesome. I love it. For those who are fiddling around on the sprite screen - here's the original design document. You can bring up the sheet in an ordinary browser at this link. - ~ Return the favor and Q: Javascript - Uncaught SyntaxError: Unexpected token EXPORT So I'm trying to make this simple demo of 5 red balls bouncing around the screen, and that's fine

Field of the Invention This invention relates to an optical disc substrate and a holographic optical disc, and, in particular, to an optical disc substrate and a holographic optical disc which have good recording properties. 2. Description of the Related Art Recently, multimedia systems which transmit, store and reproduce digital image, audio and other information are actively developed. As an optical disc which records a large amount of digital information and on which information can be reproduced repeatedly, a compact disc (CD) or a digital versatile disc (DVD) is conventionally known. A high definition digital versatile disc (HD-DVD) is also under development for an optical disc which records a larger amount of digital information than a DVD and which has a higher recording density. In a CD or a DVD, audio information is recorded as a sequence of pits formed on the surface of a disc substrate of CD-R or DVD-R and a photo disc substrate of CD-RW or DVD-RW. Recording and reproduction of the audio information are achieved by reading a signal held in the sequence of pits. On the other hand, in a phase changeable optical disc such as a DVD-RW or a Blu-ray disc (BD), not only the audio information but also, for example, image information or information for a computer are recorded as a sequence of pits formed on the surface of the disc substrate. Recording and reproduction of the image information or information for a computer are achieved by reading a signal held in the sequence of pits. If, in the case of recording information on such an optical disc, a signal having a high level is continuously recorded at a predetermined position and then the level of the signal is lowered, a zone is formed with a low reflectance (low transmittance). The zone is called a low reflectance zone or a change recording part (RES) where a phase change occurs. A method of recording such information on a disc substrate of CD-RW or DVD-RW is, for example, as follows. That is, a laser beam with a certain power is irradiated to the disc substrate and then an amorphous state or a crystal
