The heroes have been asked by their Headmaster, Exallizar, to journey to his dying monastery to protect its inhabitants from a deadly beast - only this time, the monster is more than just a threat to the lives of the monks and scholars working in the monastery. The beast has taken on an apathetic, almost childlike, quality about it, and the heroes are told to expect the worst as they attempt to find out what is behind the horror.

Travels in the Deep Wood:

Exallizar Preparatory Academy is the largest, oldest, most prestigious institution of magical study in the kingdom of Brigandia. Located in the Brigandian Forest, in a vast mountain range of limestone, it has been established for more than two thousand years. The school's current Headmaster, Exallizar, is well known to heroes across the land. Many of them have had the honor of meeting him. So when his friends, the Head Monks of the monastery, notice something wrong with the monastery's facilities they set out to investigate. Heading toward the monastery, the heroes soon find a mysterious creature that stalks the grasslands and meadows around the monastery. As they proceed to the monastery the heroes notice a city in the forest; the Convent of the Church of the Silver Doves. This is the monastery's oldest sister convent. In the time of the old head monks, the Silver Doves monastic order worked closely with the Solstheim Abbey of the elves, to provide much of the food for the monastery and other monks in the area. The heroes are told the Silver Doves have had problems with the beasts in the area, but also that the Silver Doves have the blessing of the gods. With the blessing of the gods, the higher ranking monks at the monastery are certain to be a worthy lot for helping them. The heroes are soon on their way to the monastery. Map: BASIC3: A Giving Time (Fantasy Grounds) by J.A. Kerns by J.A. ## What's new:

is a new VR driving game featuring a “dark” theme that infuses classic arcade experiences with an exciting new open world racing setup. The game is available right now for Rift, PSVR and Vive for $39.99 and comes in both single player and multiplayer modes. We had an interview with Matt Prior, Lead Game Designer, and a look at the early builds of the new VR game. The concept for the game is to take the best aspects of arcade racing games, which don’t give players a penalty for crashing, and blend them with a futuristic open world design and the freedom of movement brought by VR. Question: Cybercrasher’s Guide: What is Danger Course VR? Matt Prior: Danger Course VR is the single player and multiplayer racing simulation game for virtual reality. Developed by we’ve been studios, it is designed to create a racing simulator that brings together some of the most popular and beloved video game characteristics with a simplified open world design and a truly next generation VR experience. The game offers the most immersive aspects of arcade racing games, which don’t penalize players for crashing: real-time damage, automatically repair items, blood and injury, adrenaline and focus, and a variety of character customization options like helmets, outfits, weapons and a massive collectible catalog. CG: While we did use the controller as a means of shooting the player’s laser blaster, it is a purely skill-based game. There is no aim assist or computer driven, but your opponents will lean into the directional thruster, turn off your fuel, and lead you into the wall rather than the other way around. The only assist is your friends (and fellow racers) help and coaching on the rest of your life. CG: Taking the hardest sequence of corners...The turns are blind and I love it! The rock wall rides, the craters, those tight, diagonal corners, and the dive bombing helicopters just taking the spins out of you; all of it looks amazing. CG: We did try to include all the well known favorite racetracks from arcade racing games, characters, and events from FPS games, such as Mario Kart, Rock n’ roll racing, and

INTRODUCTION If you've played the Shinobi series of games on Playstation 2 you'll be right at home playing Ninja Blade. It plays a little like you remember the Shinobi games to play like, though far better than what they actually play like. Don't be fooled by the generic name. Instead of just being another run-and-gun game it actually combines aspects of the Metal Slug games and the Sabre Man games with true 2-D side scrolling Action Adventure gameplay. It is also a game where the number of cut scenes is almost non-existent. If you love other 2-D side scrolling action games, or even just 2-D side scrolling Action Adventure games it's well worth a look. The mission to collect all the Nunchaku and learn a few more fighting techniques is available by collecting Runes throughout the story while you also control the whole story yourself by performing "magic" actions. The levels also take the form of a 2-D side-scrolling Action-Adventure game with the action jumping from location to location. Features: Playable Ninja, Samurai, and Magician. Each character has his or her own unique fighting style with special powers that affect all the other characters. Choose your own path through the game as the story unfolds. Collect and fight with 46 Nunchakus and learn different combat techniques. See the battle from all different angles. Enjoy the most varied battles in the whole genre. Collect at least 20 medals to unlock special features for each character. Unlock all the bonuses, and listen to the dub, by completing all the missions. Level Design: In this game you can travel from place to place, fighting enemies along the way, and even hidden in some of the places you are visiting. The missions include a lot of enemies, all of them quite different, so you will have a lot of variety in your battles. There are also lots of secret areas to discover.

Movement System: The game is 2-D side scrolling Action-Adventure. You move from place to place by jumping. As you move around you can jump or throw yourself into the air and roll at a high speed so you can dodge any attack. There are two weapons you can use in the game. Kunai – These are thrown at enemies
