1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a radio-frequency tag used to tag or identify a user, an identification method of the user, and a radio-frequency identification device having an identification function of the user. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, the radio-frequency (RF) identification (RFID) has been used in retail, security, transportation, and the like. The RFID is also used for tag identifying a user at an entrance/exit of the building or in a parking lot. However, for these objects, identification of the user at a time of using is not considered. Tag Archives: The National Mall Let the car pool begin! After the fawning adulation and the hosannas, the true importance of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts is being revealed. First, the Center will be exclusive to the Kennedy family, on a par with Graceland, and only by invitation. On Sunday, April 5, the Center's 15-year celebration includes Opening Night performances by the National Symphony Orchestra, led by music director John Kadlecik. Performing are soprano Diana Damrau, violinist Joshua Bell and pianist Van Cliburn. The musical presentations by the New York Philharmonic and the orchestra of the Berliner Philharmoniker, Music Director Simon Rattle, will be broadcast nationally on PBS. The full list of performances can be found here. This is not a public event. It is not even a private celebration. It is an announcement. The House Majority Leader, John Boehner (R-Ohio), came out to sing its praises. He and his wife, Diane, "were thrilled to attend," he told reporters. The Center, named after the president who died three weeks before it opened, was created by an act of Congress in 1993. Funding has come from private donations and the sale of stock and bonds. Historians have noted that the Kennedy Center's commitment to classical music is without parallel in Washington. The "Pops" performances, airing on PBS stations nationwide, in particular, showcase the very best in American music, as does the "Carousel of Dance." The annual, free, semi-annual Ballet Open House not only brings the Center's ballet repertory to the Nation's Capital, it is an important morale builder. The
