US exports are about to shrink by a whopping $US60 billion per year. That's the equivalent of the entire economies of Greece, Indonesia or Laos - no, really. And companies are already complaining to the government that they're about to suffer crippling costs as a result. The government estimates the trade war is already costing the economy around $US10 billion each month. It will be devastating and unprecedented for US exporters to pay $US60 billion more. If you listen to the government's top dog, US Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer, it's the same argument as ever — tariffs are evil and if the Chinese don't start playing ball, the tariffs are going up. But that's not the same as saying that the US economy is suffering because of the trade war. That's a completely different argument. But back to the dollar, due to the fall in Chinese buying, the dollar hit its best weekly gain this year, the best monthly gain, and the best annual gain, but it's rising like crazy because of Trump's trade war, which will hurt US exporters just as much as the Chinese, if not more. A lot of people are complaining that the Chinese won't play ball, but that's not true. Trouble is, the US can't play ball because it's the only one of the two that's playing. China is an entirely different country to the US. And it's the most important and largest market for the US of anyone in the world. So, what do we do? We have tried all sorts of sanctions against the Chinese (if you want to call it that) and they've caused more harm to the American economy than to the Chinese. So why are we, the American people, told that we're doing this? Well, it's just that when it comes to international trade, the US has a habit of pushing something hard because ♦

Staying at home can be a bit like competing in a Darwin award: You need to find some productive ways to get on with your life while carefully maintaining a sense of humor. To help out, we enlisted the lessons of real-world boss Jesse Sheidlower for a guide on how to survive at home. Advertisement 2 of 12 Anticipate the best "Plan ahead," Sheidlower says. "It's your only chance." You can get a bit of a panic attack if you leave things to the last minute, but you won't get stuff done as effectively as if you anticipate your needs and stick to your plan. "You have to have a plan, or you'll just be checking every now and then," he says. "It's worth it in the long run." So Sheidlower says prioritize the most important things first. "Be as selective about the amount of time you spend doing work as you are about eating and sleeping." If you have kids around, make sure the kids are fed and put to bed as you finish your work -- you'll be better rested and thus more productive in the long run.
