openhth was a fan-made open-sourced project aimed at expanding high tail hall 1.7 after initial development ceased. the first and only version of openhth was 0.0.2 and contained dialogue enhancements, replaced incorrect spelling and grammar, fixed typographical mistakes in the original hth 1.7, added ambient music, and included background animation enhancements. users on the project's forum were encouraged download the latest version of openhth and assist in adding content or enhancing the game, or downloading the base version of hth 1.7 and creating their own modifications to the game. development of openhth was abandoned shortly after the first release for unknown reasons. crowchild, on the other hand, had a much more relaxed policy, and was the only studio to allow actors to form official groups such as the "crowchild actors", "crowchild lodges" and "crowchild lodges", and provided actors with a comfortable place to learn from each other and from their community. although crowchild and hth studios were often seen as competitors, crowchild's and hth studios' policies and content were very different. hth studios was much less strict in its content and monetization policy, allowing actors to form official groups, but limiting the number of interactive characters and accessible locations. the studio felt much more relaxed as a result, as did the studio's audiences. [15] crowchild's policy of allowing actors to form official groups and not limiting interactive content was met with disapproval from the studio's patrons. [16] on january 27, 2017, hth studios announced the discontinuation of scene updates and limited the number of interactive characters and accessible locations to free members in response to financial difficulties the studio has faced over the years. [17] the announcement provoked backlash among members, with accusations of hth studios and crowchild being greedy as a result of the increasing number of paid content in high tail hall over the years. [18] on july 13th, 2017, free content updates temporarily returned in the form of a character rotation system in which a single gold-exclusive character would be available for one month to free users, decided on by the $10 patrons of hth studios' patreon account. [19] this system was later discontinued in favor of a free version of the hth unity build that is scheduled to be released in the future.
