I have a recent model Dell XPS 13 laptop (8th-gen) with a webcam that's rather sensitive to minor vibrations. The webcam occasionally stays red when it's not, and the only way I've found to get it back to the normal blue color is to force a full reboot via the power button. It's a laptop, so I don't think there's a hardware setting I can flip to disable this "feature", but that also means that I can't just hold the power button to force a shutdown. Is there any software that can disable the power button from hard rebooting? I'm running Windows 10 Professional. A: Is there any software that can disable the power button from hard rebooting? Yes, there are. If it's a laptop, just disable Fast Boot (System & Security) Download and install an app called Fast Boot Off in "Add or Remove Programs" and disable Fast Boot in the Control Panel: Fast Boot Off is a great little tool that allows you to disable the Fast Boot option on a laptop. If it's a desktop, download and install Easy Shutdown in "Add or Remove Programs": When you restart the machine, Windows will disable the power button in the system tray while Windows starts up. It will also shutdown the machine if you press the power button. If you want to use both apps, you can disable Fast Boot and Easy Shutdown through the same dialog in the Control Panel.
