What's next? They are planning to add the other Adobe applications in the suite, complementing the new Creative Cloud Creative Suite. You know, the apps that we already love and rely on as professionals. So we will have access to them bi-monthly. This is a good move by Adobe to give us a sneak peak of their other anticipated plans. At the moment, users are given with a free trial to try out their new Creative Suite. Adobe is a global company of truly global reach, so this new cloud-based offering is going to be a Big Deal.

And there's more:

The new CreativeCloud is because everyone knows that all things should be at your fingertips; digitally speaking. As an added benefit, it enables us, as designers, to do what we do best - focus on our art.

They have integrated the ability to connect with our CreativeCloud, so we have the ability to export projects better to the new paradigm.

If you want to download the software, we're going to give you a free trial. Adobe's Lightroom 5 is a fine piece of software, filled with stuff you don't really need to know. There's a lot in it, but there's also a lot you get for free. And that's good news, because you have to buy $10,000 worth of camera hardware before you can get all that free stuff. Lightroom 4 was significantly better in many respects, and it seems like the quality has improved more dramatically with Lightroom 5. And for the unfamiliar, it actually has some genuinely useful, time-saving features, such as being able to track the history of your edits and delete removed images.

Photo Editing Apps | The idea of running software as complex as Photoshop directly in the browser would have been hard to imagine just a few years ago. However, by using various new web technologies, Adobe has now brought a public beta of Photoshop to the web. Flash has been dead for years, however using Flash video or other browser plugins like Silverlight? We thought that was a thing of the past. In fact, earlier this year, Chrome started blocking Flash on the web. However, one kind of software has lived on: Adobe's Flash container by default. Adobe has already decided that the new container will be the Adobe Flash Player. During this past β release cycle, Adobe has made available a plugin API that will help `eweb-platform-web-api` -a new set of interfaces for creating web apps with the Adobe Flash Player. For example, with Twitter's `pluggable-api` framework, you can even talk to Twitter as a plugin. 933d7f57e6
